SKINTAGS/FIBROMAS

Fibromas are non-malignant tumors composed of fibrous tissue that can be flat or raised. Skin tags are considered small fibromas, and the texture and color of large fibromas are different from normal skins because they are darker in color with a more fibrous texture. In particular, Afro-Caribbean skin is susceptible to Fibromas.

Skin tags appear as tiny pearl drops attached to the skin's surface. They may develop on the face, neck, armpits or groin. They may be inherited, caused by age and irritation by clothing and jewellery positioned on the collar.

Although they are harmless they are unsightly and can cause individuals to become self-conscious.

They can be treated effectively by cutting off their attachment to the skin's surface. One treatment may be sufficient or a series would be recommended where large amounts occur.

BLOOD SPOTS

Blood spots can be small or large concentrations of blood which can be flat or raised and they are commonly found on the neck or decollete area. They are believed to be a disorder of the circulatory system and although young adults may have them, they do not place priorities on their removal until they become older.

BROKEN CAPILLARIES/THREAD VEINS: (Telangiectasia):

Thread veins or broken capillaries are tiny congealed blood vessels that appear as tiny wavy lines are commonly found on the nose, cheeks and chin, particularly in thin, sensitive skins and those who suffer from allergies.

These tiny veins can be treated easily by using The Lam Probe to restore the skin to its normal appearance in one treatment or a few treatments for larger areas.

MILIA

Usually Milia looks like a hard white lump, which is formed underneath the skin, usually around the eye area, a treatment involving advanced electrolysis comfortably dries these up.
